Caring for Your New Denture

A quick reference from Metta Denture Clinic — keep this where you'll see it.

The Basics

- Clean daily — use a denture brush and a denture-specific cleaner — regular toothpaste is too abrasive and can create tiny scratches where bacteria collect.
- Rinse after meals — to remove food debris before it has a chance to settle in.
- Soak overnight — in plain room-temp water to keep your denture moist, fresh, and free of odour.
- Never use hot water — on your denture — it can warp the material. Lukewarm or cool water only.
- Handle with care — clean over a folded towel or a sink half-filled with water, so a dropped denture has a soft landing.

Cleaning by Denture Type

The basics above apply to every denture, but the material makes a difference in a few specific ways:

- Complete & acrylic partial dentures — a standard denture-cleaning solution overnight is all they need.
- Cast-frame partial dentures (metal clasps) — avoid bleach or chlorine-based solutions — they can tarnish or weaken the metal framework over time. A standard non-bleach denture cleaner is fine.
- Flexible (nylon) dentures — skip alcohol-based or strongly abrasive cleaners, which can dull or warp the flexible material. Clean with mild soap and lukewarm water, or a cleaner made specifically for flexible dentures.
- Implant overdentures — clean the denture as usual, and use a soft interdental brush around the attachment housings to prevent buildup that can affect the snap-in fit. Brush the implants themselves like natural teeth.

Not sure which type you have, or the best routine for it? Just ask — we're happy to walk you through it at your next visit.

Your First Few Weeks

A new denture takes some getting used to — this is completely normal:

- Lips and cheeks feel fuller than usual, unfamiliar sensation due to denture covering the palate
- A bit more saliva than usual for the first few days, soreness may develop as well
- Speech that feels slightly different until your tongue and cheeks adjust — reading aloud for a few minutes a day helps speed this up

Caring for Your New Denture

A quick reference from Metta Denture Clinic — keep this where you'll see it.

Adjustments are included at no charge for the first 3 months after you get a new denture — so if something feels off, come back in rather than living with it.

Eating With Your New Denture

- Start with soft foods cut into small pieces, and build back up to a normal diet gradually as you get comfortable.
- Chew slowly, using both sides of your mouth evenly, to help keep your denture balanced and stable.
- Very hot foods and drinks can feel different at first — take it slow until you're used to the new sensation.

At Night

Remove your denture before bed and let your gums rest — this reduces the risk of irritation and infection. While it's out, store it in water or a denture-soaking solution so it doesn't dry out or warp.

When to Call or Text Us

- Pain or a sore spot that doesn't improve after a few days
- Your denture feels loose, shifts, or slips when you talk or eat
- A crack, chip, or breakage

Simple repairs can sometimes be handled the same day.
